Goddard Perry Consulting appointed to Damovo pension scheme

Goddard Perry Consulting (GPC), a leading Employee Benefits Consultancy, today announced its appointment to Damovo, an Information Communication Technology company, to launch and service its new Group Personal Pension (GPP) plan. The new plan will have 220 lives.

Steve Goddard, Managing Director of GPC, said: “The Group Personal Pension market continues to be a key area for us and one in which we are seeing a great deal of growth and opportunity, especially work-place advice. With NEST around the corner, organisations are beginning to look more closely at the arrangements they provide their staff and the IFA community can help. Employers want to ensure their members are in a competitively charged scheme backed up by a quality provider and members have access to independent advice. It is vital that the pensions industry provides an alternative to NEST if we are to avoid ‘dumbing down’ pensions, and offering a high quality GPP scheme with competitive charges is an effective way of doing this.”

Lynsey Tucker, HR Director at Damovo, commented: “One of the key reasons we chose to appoint GPC was their complete dedication to work place advice and face-to-face communication with our employees. They are a Consultancy who will go the extra mile. Further to that they have an engaging and proactive approach which is a good match for our business.”
